granfactions of the DUBLIN-SOCIETY, which the bithers been published in this Paper at several fines, in Sixteen different Essays, have been so well emired by our Readers, that we shall continue to publib them, as Opportunity prefents.

For the DUBLIN-SOCIETY.

AVING thewn in our former Paper the Method of fecuring Marsh Grounds bordering on the Sea, from being overflow'd by high Tides, we shall now proceed to give Directions for Banking out the Floods of Rivers, from the low, flat Lands, which lie contiguous to them

This is particularly requifite in Ireland, because This is particularly requisite in Ireland, because the is no Country in Europe where Rains, and conquently Floods, are more frequent, and at the same line practicable here at less Trouble and Expense; cause our Rains and Floods, tho' more frequent, are of so violent as in other Countries. We are exposed to the Western Ocean, from whence are raised hose Vapours which supply this Part of the World ith Rain, and 'tis foremost in the Course of the Westerly Winds, which convey them. Hence those same herin to precipitate with us, and descend in spours begin to precipitate with us, and descend in all Showers; but in their Progress Eastward, meeting with higher Mountains and cooler Air, which rust their Passage and condense them, they come bottom their Passage and condense them, they come lown in large Quantities, and fall in heavy Rains

This Situation, it prudently husbanded, might be unted to an Advantage: The many Rivers torm'd by these constant Falls of Water, would afford us, at a small Expense, a commodious and expeditious Intercourse between the most distant Parts of this Island; nt we fuffer this Benefit to turn to our Prejudice. in Rivers, and to widen their Channels, we not only lofe the Conveniencies they offer us, but befides, the Use of the low and level Grounds along the Sides of them, which are generally our richest Soils. These being covered all the Winter long with Water, and in Summer by every Flood, become in a great Meafure useless, and produce at best but a sower, coarse Grass. The most valuable even of our Meadows, which lie along the Sides of Rivers, are in Summerfloods confiderably injured: If they are flooded be-fore Mowing, the Grass is fanded, and not fit for Cattle ; or if they should be Mowed when the Flood comes down upon them, the Grafs is spoil'd in agreat Measure, 'or perhaps carried off the Land, and the Produce of the Ground, and the Farmer's Labour and Expense all loft together.

In England the Legislature has provided, that upon Complaint made, that Rivers and Water Courses are choaked up and obstructed, there should issue out of Chancery a Commission of Sewers, to oblige the Proprietors of the Lands adjoining, to clear and fower the Channels by contributing their respective Quotas. Had the same Provision been made in Ireland, it would not have been in the Power of one Man, by his Neglect or Obstinacy, to defeat the Industry of all others concerned, and obstruct the Publick Good Whereas at present we see few Attempts to clear and widen Rivers, and none made at the Common Charge of the Parties interefted : The Inability of some, the Perversences of others, and the Difference of their Tenures, prevent the Comon Good. Every one shifts for himself, and all

If a Survey were taken of the Lands in this Kingdom, which are yearly overflow'd, they would leveral Hundred Thousand Acres Rivers spread far and near over immense Tracts of Land; and even the smallest, in low and level Grounds, do considerable Mischies. To enhance the Evil, 'tis our richest fattest Soils which are the most exposed in this Case, and consequently most injured.

This to be hoped, that the Legislature of this Kingdom, may at some proper Time take this Subest into Consideration: In the mean while, we shall instruct our Reader how he may secure himself, independently of the Concurrence of his Neighbours, and prevent the many Mischiess which attend these Inundations

The Remedy is here the fame, with the one presca. Slopeing Banks are the best Security against Inundations of all Kinds; and allowing something for the different Weight of Water, and Violence of Waves, the same Method is requir'd to confine a River, and to exclude the Sea. However, as it is not every one who has fufficient Skill to make fuch Allowances exactly, we shall chuse rather to repeat fome Things in our former Paper, than to leave the Reader at a Loss, and expote him to she Danger of making his Banks either weak and infufficient, or too large and expensive.

To avoid both Extremes, make your Trench fix Feet over, and five Feet deep; your Bank at the Diffance of one Foot and a half from the Trench, 4 Feet high. Its longest Slope towards the River of to Feet, and that towards the Trench of 6, and let the Top of the Bank be a Foot and half wide. A Bank of this Form and these Dimensions, will bear up against most Floods, sew Rivers rising higher than 2 or 3 Feet above their Level; but should any swell beyond it, make your Bank in the same Form, but proportionably higher, always a Foot above the Flood. These Banks, as well as those against the Sea, should be sown with Grass Seeds, which is much preferable to Sodding; and what Sods you raise in breaking up the Ground for the Trench, may be usefully dispos'd of, in making the Inside Breaft of the Bank.

The material Point in erecting Banks against a River, is to make them at a proper Distance from the Channel. When a River is too much confin'd, it swells confiderably upon a Flood, requires Banks of more H-ighth and Strength, and often carries all before it; whereas if you heave a Space between the Banks and River, the Waters spread, and seldom rise a or 3 Feet above their Level. 50, 80, or 100 Feet, and in some Cases so many Yards, according to the Largeness of the River, must be lest open for that Purpole. By the'e Means great Floods will have full Liberty to pass, without bearing hard upon the Banks; whereas if they are pent up within a narrow Compais, they must fwell to a great Heighth, and endanger the tearing and breaking down the Banks.

This is the Practice in the Isle of Ely, where it is Common to fee their great Banks distant 1 or 200 Yards on each Side from the Channel of the River, and when they are so made, they are always safe; but where the Distance between the Banks is narrow, there, and there only, the Banks are in Danof being broke down, and the Country over-

The Space of Ground that is left between the Banks and the River, will be far from being loft; in the dry Seasons of the Year it will afford good Grazing, and in the Part of it near the Banks you may plant Sallies, Oziers, or other Aquaticks, which be-fides the Profit arifing from them, will be of Use to shelter the Banks from Storms and Floods; but beware of planting them upon the Banks, left the Winds spoil and tear them, by shaking the Trees, and loofening their Roots.

In every Improvement the Expense should be particularly confider'd; we shall therefore observe, that the Charge of making Banks in this Method is very In Low Grounds the Soil is foft, and dug with Eafe, the Work may be all done with the Spade and Shovel, without Pick-Axes which must be us'd in Upland Ground, and the Materials are on the Spot, and at your Hand. So that it is reasonable to believe, that in a Country where Labour is so cheap, it will not cost above 18 d. or at most 2 s. a Perch, to make these Banks, and in some Places, perhaps, much less. If this Estimation holds good, a Bank of a Quarter of a Mile long, which is 80 Perches in length, will cost but 6 or 8 l. and confequently the Ground fo banked in contain a good many Acres, by laying out to fmall a Sum, you may gain the very first Year double that Value in the Improvement of your Grass, and Safety of your Meadows, and in succeeding Years much more, and be out of all Danger for the future of having your Lands overflowed and spoiled. fireyed in one Season by Floods, than it would have cost them to enclose and bank their Meadows, and free them from all Hazards.
